DEATH OF J. T. PRESSLY

Well-Known Ex-Sheriff of Marion County Passes Away.

His Course in the Railroad Strike of 1877-His Defeat of Cooper and Bright.

Ex-Sheriff John T. Pressly died, at his residence, No. 173 North Pennsylvania street, about 1 o'clock this morning. His death is no surprise to his friends, as he has been confined to his bed for several weeks with no hope of recovery. Mr. Pressly was born in Preble county, Ohio, May 7, 1831, and moved to this county with his parents when still a child. He was first known publicly here when he accepted the position of steward at the Institute for the Deaf and Dumb. He afterward became a railway engineer, and for several years was employed in that capacity by the old Bee-line road. During his services with this company he made the acquaintance of John Brough, then president of the road, and on his advice left the railroad and engaged in the sawmill and lumber business. While engaged in this business he operated a mill on the present site of the Eagle machine works. He also had a sawmill on what is now Crown Hill Cemetery, having had the contract with the first trustees of the cemetery to clear the ground. His first appearance in politics was as councilman, being elected in a ward which had formerly gone Democratic by 400 majority. He was then elected sheriff, defeating John Cooper, afterward State Treasurer, by ,900. He was afterward re-elected, with Richard J. Bright, afterward Sergeant-at-

His characteristic energy and ability were apparent in the performance of his official duties. This was especially manifested in the efficient and cool-headed manner in which he met, influenced and controlled the turbulent element at the time of the dangerous railroad strike in 1877 in this city. For ten years or more Mr. Pressly has been a large and successful farmer and stock raiser near the city. On June 25, 1855, Mr. Pressly was mar-ried to Mary A. Dunn. She died June 20, 1888. Their only children, Mrs. Daniel A. Chenoweth and Mrs. John F. Carson, survive them. He was a member of the Masonic order, thirty-second degree Scottish Rite, and was a member of the Methodist Church in good standing. A TROLLEY WIRE'S DANGER.

Sprinkling Cart Driver Knocked Unconscious-Small Boy's Dilemma.

Yesterday afternoon, about 2 o'clock, a live electric wire on the street car lines on Washington street, between New Jersey and East streets, broke and fell to the ground. It caught a driver of a sprinkling wagon full across the forehead and he fell unconscious headlong from his cart to the ground. His team ran away and was caught several squares away. Several witnesses of the affair carried the unconscious driver into a drug store, where he shortly revived, none the worse for his experience excepting a large burn across his forehead. The driver had hardly recovered when a small barefooted boy, with the curiosity of a street urchin, ran into the street and seized the wire with both hands. He was hardly visible for the next few moments, as he was thrown around in a promiscuous way. He fortunately escaped being shocked to death by not allowing his feet to touch the iron rails. The boy had lost all con-trol of his senses, and held on to the wire until a bystander ran to his assistance and kicked the wire from his hands, which were badly burned. The repair wagon had been called to Irvington just previous to the accident, and it took several hours in reaching the spot, the cars being detained all the while.

Board of Safety Makes Appointments at the Police Station.

The quarantine of the Eddy-street premises and the Friedly Inn had made it necessary that the Health Board have several more officers in their department. The Board of Safety yesterday appointed the following men for the purpose: Frank S. Jared, Edward Berryman, Charles Em-Leonard Shrotz, Silas G. Patton, R Hudnall, S. H. Ettey, J. B. Brown and Martin Davitt.

The officers confined in the station house are counting the hours and wishing as they never wished before for Sunday to come as on that day the sentence of the Board of Health will have expired and they will then be released, if no case of smallpox develops among them before that time. It has been a weary two weeks for them.

Arrival of the Tramps-The "General" Will Preach on "If Christ Came to Indianapolis."

"General" Frey and his notorious army reached this city yesterday and installed himself in Landers's porkhouse, on Blake street, already tenanted by "Colonel" De Aubrey's aggregation. The General left Brazil yesterday morning on the Vandalia train No. 12, and reached this city at 3:30 o'clock. He was met at the Union Station by C. A. Johnson and "Colonel" Ballard. of the local reception committee, who esremained until after breakfast. In company with several of the local agitators he viewed the city from afoot and ascertained the general sentiment of the people toward the movement. He was not greatly impressed with the "sentiment." Shortly before noon he returned to the hotel, where he rested until the middle of the afternoon, when he went to the porkhouse to mingle with his army which, in the meantime, had

The army had chartered the box car in which the members had reached Brazil. They made several attempts to attach their car to a through freight train, but did not succeed in doing so until freight No. 26, J. M. Murphy, conductor, arrived at Brazil, yesterday morning, about 9 o'clock. Conductor Murphy received orders to allow the car to be attached to the rear end of his train, but did not know that the army was to accompany him. The car containing the horse and buggy together with some camping utensils, was attached, and the signal to go ahead was given. The army swarmed on both sides and mounted the cars. Conductor Murphy and his men knew that to remonstrate would do no good and saw the army install themselves into comfortable positions without saying a word. The train started at 9:45 o'clock in the morning and reached the West-side yards shortly after 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The train, as it arrived at the yards, was a new sight to the railroad men and the many citizens who rapidly collected. On either side, the entire length of the train, the tramps had installed themselves on the edge of the cars and had their feet hanging over the sides of the cars in true "hobo" style. The appearance of the army was entirely congruous with its experience. The faces of the men had become blackened from the dust and smoke. There were men of all ages. Some were mere boys, who had taken that easy and happy-go-lucky way on being in contact with the "professional" element which was, by far, the most conspicuous. Others were old men who seemed entirely too feeble to encounter such trials and hardships which the army has met with so far in its march. The greater part of the army consisted of men in the prime of life. The dress of the different members of the army showed no difference. All wore good shoes, well adapted to walking. Their clothes were soiled and dust begrimed, and many were worn out. A number had small American flags pinned conspicuously on the front of their coat lapels. When the army alighted from the train, the members made a rush for a neighboring pump and quenched their thirst, though they showed no inclination to remove the dirt and dust from their faces and hands. A short pause then followed, in which the men stood around and gazed citywards. catching their first view of Indianapolis. In the absence of "General" Frey, "Lieutenant" Payne, of Los Angeles, Cal., was in command. In a short time "Colonel" De Aubrey and "Lieutenant" Salisbury appeared in a buggy and the army made ready for the march to the city and the porkhouse. The officers stated that the army numbered about 250 men and these arranged themselves in files of two, with the largest man in the army, "Jim" Leadworth, at their head, carrying a large flag. The army marched east on the Vandalia tracks to Harding street, thence north to Washington street, and east to the covered river bridge. The march of the army was followed by hundreds of citizens and workmen of the factories and shops. The old river bridge was crossed and the army platform in front to shout a welcome to their kindred. The army immediately broke rank and scattered themselves promiscuously around the vicinity. A number started out on secret foraging expeditions to get a bite to eat from sympathizing citizens. Some sought soft places on the floor of the porkhouse and rested their wearied limbs. The greater number, as soon as they were at liberty, rushed for White river, which runs at a distance of two hundred feet away, and gave themselves their first bath for many a day. After a short time, in which some of the men made themselves acquainted with the young women working at the cotton mill, pickets were thrown out and the usual military system of the army was enforced. A number of citizens attempted to pass to and fro between the lines, but owing to their inability to give the countersign, they were promptly ordered to retreat, which was instantly obeyed. "Col." De Aubrey and his "army," with the aid of the reception committee, managed to have on hand quite a large amount of cofwith a liberal hand to their fellows. The "Freyites" thereupon made a number of small fires around the porkhouse building, water was produced in cans from White river, the coffee was put in cans and the recent arrivals were soon treating themselves to their first coffee since they left Brazil. The reception committee, in the meantime was out hustling and by night time had on hand a sufficient supply of provisions to afford a scanty stock of edibles for the army. In the evening the army, for the most

soon drew up in front of the porkhouse

where the contingency of "Colonel" De

Aubrey had arrayed themselves on the part, remained around the porkhouse, while those that roamed around, went no further than White river or the Hoosier mill. When bed time arrived (there being no set time, each man choosing his own hour) the De Aubreyltes and the Freyltes sought different parts of the porkhouse and slept through the night on the bare floor. Though the two factions are quartering in the same place, in addition to sharing each other's rations, the two remain apart and are governed by different regulations and rules. The De Aubreyites stated yesterday that they would attempt to join the Freyites, but the latter are not talking and it is thought the two will remain separate bod-

HE WAS BORN LAZY. "Gen." Frey Very Candid-Expects to

Coin Money Here. "General" Lewis C. Frey was seen at his hotel vesterday afternoon, and to the reporter he said, as he lolled in a large cushioned chair: "You're welcome. know that you roast us fellows, but no one could keep you fellows from anywhere, and so what is the use of me trying to elude you. I have talked to thousands of newspeaper men, and I find that they are the same as other humans. Some treat us all right. Others are 'fair to middlin', while they are others who seem to delight in roasting us. You want to know a little about me, do you? I am a mechanical engineer by trade. I am proud of my position as general of this reform army. The rest of the army are either mechanics or tradesmen, with a few professional men. We are not 'hobos.' We are workingmen out of work. When we get to Washington I don't know what we will do, I never count my chickens before they are hatched. I never cross a bridge until I reach it. We have that easy quality of not worrying our minds about the future. We have had a large and beautiful city, what is the use of us hurrying out of it?" "You want to know how my army of 250 mes happen to travel in a single box car. Well, if you had the experience of us fellows, you would understand the art. It is nothing more than 'sardining' yourself in-side. Those that can't get inside ride on top. Some manage to hang on in some unexplained manner or other. We don't know just how it is, but we get there just the same. We have not picked up any recruits since leaving Terre Haute. A few joined us at Terre Haute, but we simple asked them to resign. We didn't want them.' "Will the army under 'Colonel' De Au-brey join yours in this city?"

wealer and said: "I haven't anything to say. That will be settled in the future." On being pressed he said: "Well, I'll say this much. Those fellows deserted us once; that is, De Aubrey and Salisbury did, and they won't get a chance to be with us again. They will not join the first regi-

"How long will the army remain here?" "The army will stay here until arrange ments for proceeding are completed. I don't know myself what we will do. My policy is that as long as God is with us and it don't rain we are all right. It won't be long, however, until the army will be run in a profitable manner. At Brazil we held meetings in the opera house and charged admission. We have about twenty dollars in the treasury now, and intend to increase it. In a few days I will look around for suitable grounds on which to hold meetings, and if I am able I will lease it and then charge admission, say 10 cents. At Terre Haute there were always large crowds around us, and as your city is so much larger, we will simply coin money. I am going to sleep and eat with the men at the barracks, though this hotel will probably be made the headquarters for the

FREY WILL PREACH.

"If Christ Came to Indianapolis" to Be His Subject.

"General" Frey threatens to deliver a sermon next Sunday night. The topic of his discourse will be, "If Christ Came to Indianapolis." The "General's" action in a theological way will depend largely upon the attitude of the Indianapolis ministers toward his movement. Last night the "General" addressed an assemblage of labor delegates in the dining room of the hotel where he is stopping. While awaiting the arrival of the representatives of the various labor organizations the California agitator held a brief informal reception in the parlors and received a reporter about 7:30 o'clock. The "General" was in the act of dismissing a couple of men from the cigarmakers' union. The industrial leader said he was pleased to meet reporters at all times, and at the same moment swept a couple of half dollars from the table into his pocket.

About 9 o'clock "General" Frey stepped down to the dining room, where he found a delegation of labor representatives waiting him. He talked for two hours on the incidents of the long trip from California to this city, and explained the manner in which he proposes to put his cause before Congress at the round-up. He stated that he was in no hurry to reach Washington, but expects to take his own time and hopes to educate the masses en route. The "General" was somewhat taken back when he announced his intention of meeting the ministers of the city this morning, and was told that the Idianapolis clergy had no sympathy with the movement. He declined to accept the statement, and avowed that he would preach a sermon next Sunday. The topic, he said, would be "If Christ Came to Indianapolis." This morning at 10 o'clock the "General" will receive the clergy in his parlors. This afternoon he will devote to the business men, and to-night, if he can secure a hall or tent large enough to hold the masses, he may perhaps deliver an address. The "General" is modest, and doesn't care to speak to less than twenty or thirty thousand people, Yesterday afternoon he called at the executive mansion and secured an audience with Governor Matthews. The visit was somewhat prolonged.

FRANKLIN LANDERS'S GUESTS. The View the Police Take of the Horde of Tramps.

It is not probable that the influx of tramps will be allowed to roam the city at will. Yesterday the proprietors of the Hoosier mill, located a short distance from the porkhouse, complained that evil-appearing members of the army had been seen hanging around the mill at late hours during the past few nights. Great quantities of grain and flour lie in plain view and in unguarded places, and the proprietors, thinking that the temptation might prove too great, asked that the police keep a strict night watch. The question of allowing the army to build fires in a helter-skelter manner also suggested itself to Superintendent Powell. The cotton mill proprietors stated that the army does not use any judgment as to where it builds the fires, and, in case of a strong wind, the sparks are liable to be carried through the open windows on to the great piles of cotton that are stored in the building. Chief Webster was consulted, and to-day he will investigate, and if he reports the fires dangerous the army will be ordered to cover their fires and to build no more. "Are the members of the army a nuisance?" suggested itself to the police last night. The citizens of the Blake-street neighborhood are already complaining of the army. Superintendent Powell held last night that the army had been given the privilege by Franklin Landers of staying in his porkhouse, and this, in a sense, made the members of the army his guests. Considered in this light the police have no power to arrest any of the army as a nuisance fee and biscuits, which they distributed | unless they individually violate the law. Officers in citizens' ciothes were stationed in the vicinity of the porkhouse after roll call last night. About 6:30 o'clock a crowd of spectators began to "guy" the guards as they took their places. Among these was Walter Reeves, a colored boy. Meehl, a guard, became enraged and struck the boy several times. The crowd were about to close in on the guard when detectives Doherty and Kaehn arrested Meehl and Reeves. Meehl stated at the county jail that he joined the army at Terre Haute, and was a member of Company E. First Indiana Regiment. He was slated on a charge of assault and battery. The remainder of the army watched the fate of their companion as he was arrested without any show of resistance. The officers received strict orders to arrest any of the army who attempt to go beyond law-

The Government and Frey. A dispatch from Washington says the War Department has taken no action toward interfering with the Frey party for capturing a train on the Vandalia road Wednesday, and probably will not do so unless application for assistance is made by the Governor of Indiana. The Vandalia line is not operating under the direction of the United States, and therefore the federal government cannot take the initiative in moving against the train stealers. It is evident that the national authorities are somewhat disappointed, the dispatch says, and chagrined at the failure of the Governors and local authorities in Western States to do their full duty in such cases as that happening at Terre Haute yesterday. All along, it is thought in official circles at Washington, that there has been shown a disposition to refrain from interfering with these organized bodies, even where they have violated property rights and the laws of the States, each locality contenting itself with transferring the army as rapidly as possible to the neighboring town or State as the easiest way to get rid of the trouble. It cannot be set up in extenuation by the State authorities that they haven't the power to deal with the law breakers, for the national government has shown its readiness to exert its forces and powers whenever called upon by the authorized authorities.

EYSTER'S LAST WORDS

Conflict in the Parker-McAfee Case as to the Evidence.

Charles L. Henry Gets an Ovation-Cooper's Enemies Working to Down Him-Other State News.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. FRANKLIN, Ind., April 26.-When the Parker-McAfee case was called this morning two peremptory challenges were made. George Davenport was excused by the defense and J. R. Bridges by the State. The entire forenoon was then devoted to filling these places, which was at last done after a large number of talesmen had been called into the box. The jury is now composed of F. P. Barnhizer, W. D. Lattimore, Charles Farmer, O. B. Clark, Frank Crowell, Todd Earnest, Edward Ditmars, John J. Pool, E. P. Lowe, Marshall Deer, James W. Ransdell and Bert Tilson. Six of the jurors are farmers, one is a plasterer, one a hack driver, one a hardware clerk, one a storekeeper at Bud and two are carpenters.

Prosecutor Holtzman made a statement of the case to the jury immediately after dinner, and about 3 o'clock the first witness was called. It was Dr. Ernest C. Reyer, of Indianapolis, who was present at the post mortem, and who testified as to the nature of the wound inflicted on Eyster. Following this Mrs. Eyster was placed on the stand. But little testimony was given by her, however, as the point of the admissibility as evidence of Eyster's dying statements to her was raised. The point was argued before Judge Johnson, the jury having been dismissed. The court here adjourned until to-morrow The court room was crowded this afternoon, many of the witnesses from Indianapolis being present. Parker and McAfee appear in good spirits. The prisoners are under charge of Deputy Thomas Gillaspy, who was appointed to take charge of them by Judge Johnson. The law firm of Buckingham & White was to-day appointed to assist the defense. The array of legal talent is now pretty evenly divided, and a long struggle is looked for. At the adjournment of court Judge Johnson gave the jurors in-structions to hold no conversation with any one about the case and to read no paper accounts of the proceedings.

City Clerk John Mahoney is also a delegate and an avowed opponent of Mr. Cooper. Attorney Kollmeyer is now making a tour of the district with a view of amalgamating the anti-Cooper forces. Cooper's brother, who was called East to consult with the Congressman, has returned and is making a vigorour fight for delegates. Captain Barrett's History.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., April 26.-The report that Captain Addison Barrett, military storekeeper and one of the officers in charge of the United States quartermaster's department at this place, had been ordered to San Francisco, brings to mind several interesting facts in that connection. Captain Barrett has been stationed at this post continually since the buildings were completed in 1873. There is but one other person in the United States occupying the position of military storekeeper, and when these two men retire or die no successors to them will be appointed, the offices expiring with the men, Captain Barrett has but five years remaining before he will be placed on the retired list. Prior to being stationed here he was on duty in San Francisco, to which place he is now ordered. Capt. Frederick Von Shrader, of Schuylkill Barracks, Pa., has been ordered to report for duty at this department.

Odd Fellows' Demonstration.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. PERU, Ind. April 26.-The seventy-fifth anniversary of Odd Fellowship was celebrated in this city to-day in an elaborate manner. The principal event was a large parade in the afternoon, in which all the lodges of the city and the Daughters of Rebekah participated. This was followed by a mass meeting in the courthouse, pre-sided over by Judge Cox. The principal address was given by Past Grand Master W. H. Leedy. This evening there was a banquet in the Grand Army Hall, followed short speeches and music. Visiting lodges were in attendance from various parts of the State. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal, MUNCIE, Ind., April 26.-A team from the Muncie Gun Club to-day defeated a team from the Union City club by a score of 224 to 195 out of a possible three hundred. Six men made the team for each club and each man shot at fifty clay birds. Kettner for Muncle made the best score, only missing three birds. Proctor, for the visitors, stood second, missing four out of fifty. The score was as follows: Muncie-George Kettner, 47; Byron Snell, 39; Goley Williamson, 39; Dick Davis, 35;

C. L. Bender, 34; James Simmons, 30; total, Union City-Charles Proctor, 46; Frank Murphy, 41; Ed Koontz, 32; John Parrent. 30; Joseph Schaub, 26; Steven Cowdery, 20; At the last match between these teams Muncie was defeated.

Greenfield Bonds Sold. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

GREENFIELD, April 26.-To-day bids were received for $26,000 of water-works bonds of the city of Greenfield. They will run ten to twenty years with 6 per cent. interest. The sale attracted a large number of bidders from Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Chicago, Hayes & Son, of Cleveland, being the purchasers at a premium of $2,732. This reduces the interest to 5 per cent, and furnishes additional ready money for the city. Mr. Henry Eitel, representing the Union Trust Company, of Indianapolis, went as high as $2,731 for the bonds. It shows Greenfield's credit to be gilt-edged. The wells for the water supply are now being drilled, and work on the plant will be pushed so that the plant will be completed in August.

Grand-"The Marble Heart." It is doubtful whether Lawernce Barrett ever played "The Marble Heart" to a greater audience than that which filled the Grand Opera House last night to see a reproduction of this famous old drama by a company composed of Indianapolis talent. Of course, the star parts of Raphael and Volage, played, as they have been, by the best men who ever trod the American stage, could not have been intrusted to any but experienced actors. Old stagers like Frederick Lorraine, who directed the performance, and William Lloyd, both of whom have played with many of the favorite American stars, were absolutely necessary to lend artistic tone to the production. That they in every way merited their reputation was evinced by the outbursts of applause, the curtain calls and the numerous bunches of flowers that marked every appealing situation. Friends of members of the cast crowded the house and, though meaning well, they were certainly ill-timed in their profuse donation of flowers, which came on the stage in showers, often in the midst of trying and pathetic scenes, sometimes marring the effect of the most thrilling climaxes. That the actors themselves did not sometimes burst into laughter speaks well for their training. The settings were all arranged with much study and added no little charm to the acts. On the shoulders of Mr. Lorraine rested the great burden of the success or failure of the performance. That he would succeed was apparent from his first entrance, which called forth a flattering demonstration, provoked largely by his actor-like bearing. His artistic temperament and graceful movements, combined with a striking face that has character and tragedy written in every line; dark, glowing eyes, now flashing with the fire of genius, or now burning with subdued emotion, ever changeable and full of expression as a woman's, all proclaimed plainer than words that he was not only playing the part of the sensitive-brained artist to his limit, but that, for the time being, he lived it. The sympathy of the audience was his. The poor and weak, but, withal, human traits of the susceptible Raphael were depicted true to the character as the author had drawn them. The facial resemblance to the late Lawrence Barrett, so frequently marked throughout the performance, was not the result of clever work in the dressing room, as Mr. Lorraine has it natural to a degreee.

As Diogenese, and then Ferdinand Volage, the witty French editor of the 'Magic Lantern," as well as the constant friend of Raphael, William Lloyd played a strong support. This is the part in which Louis James never failed to reap the lion's share of applause when supporting Law-rence Barrett. The lines teem with wit, cynicism and philosophy, calling out laughter or applause at the closing of nearly every speech. Mr. Lloyd fit the part as if made for it, shedding a bright ray of humor through every act and greatly relieving the sombre tone which would otherwise dominate the play. He sustained every way his reputation for a painstaking actor of much ability. Herman Frey showed an admira-ole grasp of the part of dore, whose riches fascinate the marblehearted Mme. Marco and cause her to quench her love for the humble Raphael. Miss Marie Martin made her stage debut as Marco and was the recipient of any amount of appreciative testimonials. A more difficult role could hardly have been chosen for a candidate for Thespian honors. Mme. Marco is a worldly woman, intellectually superior to her female companions. and must act contrary to honest impulse. Miss Martin sustained the trying character, however, with much ability. With the simpering viscount and his silly mannerisms John Corcoran made a hit and never falled to cause an uproar of laughter whenever his voice was heard. George Van Burg was a delicate Lord Merton and Thomas Sullivan a handsome Fred de Courcy. The petulant Clementine was well handled by Miss Kate McCarthy, who assisted in the comedy work. Misses Celia Donlan, Fannie Ferguson and Anna Gantley had to make society butterflies out of Marietta, Fedora and Julia, and succeeded cleverly. Miss Mollie Garen was the innocent Marie to a picture, and Miss Kate Nolan made a dignified and pathetic Madame Duchatlet. The sustaining of the studio scene was largely in the hands of Willis L. Scudder and Bert Hunter as Alcibiades and Strabon. The statues, Aspasia, Lais and Phryne, were a work of art. These were personated by Misses Nellie Burke, Nellie Graham and Nellie Bryant. Jos. D. Cain made an appropriately pompous John. During the performance Miss Hattle Neighbors sang "Waiting" and Miss Mabel Glenn sang "Leonore." Both vocalists were encored and burdened with bouquets.

Two Attractive Programmes. The dramatic performances arranged by Mrs. Harriet A. Prunk and to be given by the pupils of her school next Thursday and Friday nights, at the Grand Opera House, are creating much talk, and bid fair to attract large audiences. The casts of the several plays to be produced are made up of excellent talent, and promise to surprise even the most skeptical of amusement-going people. On Thursday evening "Come Here" and "Sunset," two clever one-act plays, the latter being of especial force, will be given, together with a scene from "The Love Chase" and a German character sketch. Friday night "As You Like It," with a cast of handsome young ladies, will be given in full, the only man in the production being Orlando. This innovation is something after the fashion of the famous club in New York, comprising well-known actresses, who recently produced that play with a cast entirely made up of the fair and talented members. Seats will be on sale for these coming entertainments, beginning next Tuesday, at the Grand Opera House box office.

Amusement Notes.

Professor Kennedy, the mesmerist, will open a week's engagement at English's Opera House Monday night. The sale of seats will commence to-morrow morning. After the performance there was no better pleased man than Father Weber, who had been instrumental in securing the entertainment as a benefit for the K. F. M. and the Weber Zouaves.

"Almost as Palatable as Milk"

This is a fact with regard to Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. The difference between the oil, in its plain state, is very apparent. In you detect no fish-oil taste. As it is a help to digestion there is no after effect except good effect. Keep in mind that Scott's Emulsion is the best promoter of flesh and strength known to science.
